RHEUMATISM,

BY THE

DIAMOND

RHEUMATIC CURE.

This statement is substantially a FACT based upon evidence in the possession of the Agents for the sale of numerous testimonials from most of the very leading men in all the walks of life, and particularly the masses of our most respectable and trustworthy families.

Diamond Rheumatic Cure.

In its history, this invaluable medicine occupies the most honorable position possible for any remedy to attain. A few years since, it was known only to the friends and neighbors and patients of the proprietor, and always a source of pride to them as ever troubled with Rheumatism, and in fact by cause to the relief of physicians famous by and through their professional associates, and had gained great value as a Rheumatic Remedy, the demands for it became so frequent and urgent as to oblige, by necessity as to increase its facilities for manufacture. Its reputation rapidly exceeded all known powers, because of its unfailing success in every case of Rheumatism that came under its influence. Letters of thanks and testimonials were duly received from the most prominent men in the United States and Canada, and in this way, and from its own remarkable success, it has attained the position it now occupies. Wherever introduced, all it has received the most flattering testimonials in the treatment of all rheumatic complaints. In this we are really grateful and happy, as this one becomes our continued basis for safe and frequently painstaking to do we may claim, and because we open a new field in medical science, and cause all those who have been needless sufferers for ages found so difficult even to be located. We also place ourselves unreserved. We solicit the strong and slumber in God's peace, by making the following going to the use of this injured liquor, and save him scores of times its cost to describe it. We carry consent and gladness into the home of the afflicted, and consequently are remembered by millions of grateful souls.

This medicine is for sale by all Druggists through out the United States and Canada. If it happens that your Druggist has not got it in stock, ask him to send to the Wholesale Agents,

J. W. PERKINS & CO., or W. W. WHITTLE & CO., Portland, and GEORGE C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston.

THE MEMORY OF THE BRAVE.

"There's rosemary, that's for remembrance."

It would be a sad day indeed, for the country, when its citizens should cease to remember the heroism and sacrifice by which it was preserved, or to honor the memories and the graves of its fallen defenders. But that day, thank Heaven, has not yet arrived, nor is it probable that a patriotic people or their descendants will ever prove so false to themselves and to their heroic dead as to forget the glory of their devotion or cease to entwine their memories and their monuments with the flowers of perennial love. The passing years should but brighten the halo which surrounds noble deeds, and as events that were recently so full of vital reality become the cherished traditions of the Republic, the record should stand out clearer and the pages glow with additional splendor as centuries, year after year, how great was the triumph for humanity and how indomitable the principles preserved by the loyalty and valor of the men who perilled their lives in stemming the red tide of rebellion and anarchy.

The dead heroes sleep sweetly and need no demonstrations from earthly hands, but we who are living need the inspiration afforded by a contemplation of their deeds, and in keeping their memories green we leave the richest inheritance to our children. To-day this community will give special remembrance to those who surrendered all that we enjoy in life in order that the principles of freedom and justice might not be trampled down, in order that we might live secure under the protection of the Flag of our Fathers. Surely no flowers will be too fragrant, no wreaths too beautiful to be strewn upon the mounds beneath which repose the mortal remains of the comrades and dear ones who bared their breasts to the storm of battle which burst so threateningly upon our beloved country. Even the laggard Spring has latterly struggled in its detaining bonds to array itself for the touching festival, while the tremulous hands of age and the crippled fingers of childhood have been busily culling and weaving the purest of the early blossoms into garlands for the soldiers' graves.

It is a simple thing to lay a few tender buds upon the grass which covers the form of a departed loved one, a little thing to raise a flag banner over the grave of one who died in the front of battle, or who was stricken down by disease while following the Old Flag, it is but a slight service which surviving comrades can perform, to march with annually decreasing ranks to the "bivouac of the dead," and stand with uncovered heads while the lengthening Roll of Honor tells how many have already pitched their tents on Fame's eternal camping-ground. But in these simple tributes there is the deep significance of fidelity to the memories of those who have fallen and of reverence for the cause for which so many precious lives were given. Not merely valor or self-sacrifice is thus commemorated, but on this day, of all days, we should remember that distinction between right and wrong, between liberty and oppression, between devotion and loyalty, between honor and faithlessness which renders the eulogy of our dead soldiers something more than mockery and which enshrines the names of our fallen among those who have truly earned the veneration of posterity.

JEFFERSON ON INDEPENDENT JOURNALS

[From the Boston Journal.]

Thomas Jefferson was the founder of American politics. He had the same interest in political action which Franklin had for a enemy or Jonathan Edwards for unbroken reasoning and his views in the main were as sound as they were acute. It is no wonder, therefore, that among the standard political characters of our country who seem to be his protégés should be found the independent editor. In fact Jefferson explicitly says: "I think an editor should be independent—that is, of personal influence, and not be moved from his positions on the mere authority of an individual. This is good, so far as it goes, and there are some parties who will think that secures the whole ground, as they maintain that parties are but mere aggregations of individuals, with no collective authority. Not so thought Jackson for in this same letter—addressed to Duane, under date of April 30 1811—he proceeded to say:

"But with respect to the general opinion of the political section with which he habitually reads the duty seems very like that of a member of Congress. Some indeed think that independence requires them to follow always their own opinion without respect for that of others. This has never been my opinion, nor my practice when I have been of that or any other body. Differing on a particular question from those I agree to be of the same political principles with myself, and with whom I generally in right and safety can consult some of the infirmity of the human mind and of my own in particular, with respect for the accumulated judgment of my friends has induced me to suspect error on my suppression in such a if to suppose my own opinion wrong and to act with them or theirs.

Hence he concludes that if the measures which have been pursued are approved by the majority it is the duty of the minority to acquiesce and conform." Without applying the remarks to the very letter, for the most he does is to say that the position of a party editor is very like that of a member of Congress, the scope of Jefferson's principle is very obvious. He regards parties as the necessities of free institutions. They are the only instrumentality by means of which the citizen—on the same level with millions of others, with all their shades of opinion, character and purpose—can bring his energies to bear upon government and legislation. But a party is not a monetary whirl, driven now here and now there, according to the impulse of the majority that happens to control it. It is rather of an institutional character, lasting through generations, or at least through distinct political epochs, until the objects which effected its organization have either been attained or have become obsolete. Of course, then, parties can only be maintained in their efficiency by that wise deference and compromise on the part of their members which Jefferson inculcates above.

Against all this is the theory of independent journalism, which simply tends to political anarchy. It seeks to destroy all parties by disintegration, claiming that a journal should be free to act with one political organization to-day and another to-morrow, or at the same time with one upon one question and with another upon another. And this is the main connection and layer between the masses and the Government would be taken away, and good legislation and official rule would be a mere matter of chance. We should have [illegible] opinion was independent of interest. But it would be powerless for good, and when either leads to a careful analysis would be found to consist only of the substitution of personal whim and personalities for sturdy reasoning and comprehensive. Jefferson foresaw the whole thing, and his conception of it bears well.

THE GOVERNORSHIP.

COMMENTS OF EASTERN PAPERS

[From the Eastport Sentinel.]

The editor of the BANGOR "WHIG AND COURIER" now says that he had the audacity to suggest the name of General Connor as our next Governor, without waiting to receive instructions from or consulting with any Republican "leader" that he had never discussed the matter either personally, by letter or by proxy with the editor or conductor of any other newspaper in the State, and aside from his belief in the popularity of General Connor and his conviction that such a candidate would be favorably received, he had not the slightest intimation of the course that would be pursued by any other paper.

It is no use Brother Boutelle, to try to convince our Democratic friends that any thing that is now done for the good of the Republican party is not the work of a political ring.

[From the Calais Advertiser.]

"The BANGOR WHIG in a lengthy article explains the origin of Gen Connor's candidacy. We are glad that "WHIG" says it is not the result of a political conspiracy and that it once in response to the petitions of his name and presented it to that consulting political leaders. If these so and Mr Boutelle would not be about it, it removes the only objection to Gen Connor—That he is in every way fitted for the place no one has denied. Personally we should prefer Hon. J. A. McIlroy, Judge of Probate of Penobscot, but one of these gentlemen will be good candidates to get a rousing majority this fall.

[From the Calais Times.]

The BANGOR WHIG to-day has a leading editorial Saturday morning advertised pretty conclusively the talk in some quarters that the bringing forward of General Connor's name was perpetrated by a ring of politicians and newspapers. The strongest evidence to any such view of the non-consistency of such a ring is furnished by an analysis of the character of that support which General Connor received. To have formed a ring of such materials as it got even among the probabilities.

No abstract can do justice to the exhaustive and masterly argument of Mr. Evarts in the Tilton-Beecher trial. At the close of the session on Friday the jurors observed to proceeding on Saturday, and as Monday is a legal holiday, the case will not be resumed until Tuesday, when Mr. Evarts will continue his argument for the defense.

MR. EVARTS' GREAT ARGUMENT.—We clip the following extracts from a letter of the New York dailies:

There is at last a prospect that the Brooklyn trial will soon be brought to a close. The defence is attempting its last work, and Mr. Evarts to whom has fallen the duty of building up Mr. Beecher's case, is making an effort worthy of his reputation. His summing up of the evidence is bright and happy, and he is a sagacious legal argument with appropriate and witty quotations, which have had the effect of putting his audience into excellent humor. Its effect on the jury, of course, remains to be seen, but there can be no question of the ability and dexterity displayed by the lawyer in his defence of his client.—Herald.

The interest in the Beecher trial seemed to reach its climax in the court room yesterday, in the beginning of Mr. Evarts' argument. The public will doubtless follow the reports with equal appreciation of its importance. Wholly aside from the merits of the case under discussion Mr. Evarts' argument will provoke general admiration. He never masked mere, and on the that was not interesting. The promises to display him at his best. It is sparkling, witty, satirical severe, ingenious in use of evidence, and always bright and clear as sunlight.—Tribune.

Decoration Day was observed in Philadelphia, Boston and many places in New England on Saturday. In Washington the day was observed as a holiday and the graves at Arlington were handsomely dressed. The President, and Cabinet attended. Flowers were more scarce than usual owing to the backwardness of the season, although there were generous contributions from the Government hot houses.

POLITICAL AND FREEMASH

Senator Stevenson, of Kentucky, is credited with having that the Democratic party will be broken to pieces if Reconstruction is made the financial question.

The Lowell Courier thinks it is of Boston had a Republican Mayor and Massachusetts a Republican Governor we should hear something said about all the recent disorders being the result of social rule.

In the Nebraska Constitutional Convention a proposition is under discussion, with a probability of its incorporation into the new Constitution, for submitting to a direct vote of the people the election of United States Senator.

The Hon. James G Blaine and Secretary Bristow will deliver addresses at the dedication of the new college buildings of Washington and Jefferson college, at Washington, Penn., on June 7th. They are both graduates of the College.

Notices are uncertain in New Hampshire. Frank Hoiand, one of the Democratic Representatives from Manchester turns out to have been christened Francis. We presume that Frank Frances, etc., is a warm supporter of Gov. Weston's ticket.

"It is all right, of course, to invite Gladstone to participate in the Lexington centennial festivities, but then it is very much as if a big Injun were to ask you into his wigwam to look at the scalp-lock of your grandfather." This is the view which a Western newspaperhakes of it.

The Indianapolis Journal says: "In round figures, the increase of expenditures during one year of Democratic municipal administration in this city amounted to $218,774.38. Paste these figures in your hat." The fact is doubtless thought to be good enough to be good against assertions.

Prof Marsh contradicts certain statements published in certain papers relative to his interest in the Indian question. He does not retract one criticism made of the management of the Indian Bureau, and says that he has evidence of fraud practiced on Red Cloud and his tribe which he is ready to give before any proper tribunal.

Daniel Webster, writing of the science of politics, in 1830, said: "For my part, though I like investigation of political questions, I give up what is called the 'Science of political economy.' There is no such science. There are no rules on the subject as fixed and invariable as that their aggregate constitutes a science. I believe I have patiently read over twenty volumes, from Adam Smith to Professor Raw of Virginia, and from the whole, if I were to pick out with one hand all the mere notions, and with the other all the doubtful propositions, little would be left."

Mr. Carruth, the Vindicator editor who was shot by Mr. Landis, has resigned the editorial management of the Vindicator. Indianapolis. In his valedictory he says:

"This sudden and jarring of our connection with newspaperdom will surprise, and doubtless disgust, many of our friends, but there seems no alternative. Two months' constant wrestle with a hostile malady in our brain has convinced us that we are no capacity to entangle ourselves and publish an independent political newspaper at the same time. Our inflamed eyesight, shattered nerves and pounding brain admonish us that for the coming year we must not strive too far above the capital."

A SAD CASE.—When a lifelong friend of Mrs. Lincoln went to her last week and told her plainly that she was insane and that her best friends thought it best that she should go to an asylum, the unfortunate woman said: "It may be so; and what if it be so, what wonder is it! Have I had enough to derange any woman's brain? Did I not see my husband assassinated before my eyes? have I not been homeless for years, and have I not buried all my children with the exception of Robert? Do you wonder that I am deranged?"

THE BLACK HILLS.—Information is received at Omaha from Fort Laramie that the Gordon Black Hills outfit, which started Capt. Walker off and proceeded on their way, were captured by Col. Anson Mills' command. The entire outfit, except enough provisions to last them until they reached Fort Randall, was destroyed. Gordon, the leader, is en route to Cheyenne a prisoner. The remainder of the party are en route to Fort Randall under escort of Capt. Walker's command. Captain Walker has their arms and munitions.

Taylor's stone building in Worcester, Mass., was almost totally destroyed by fire Friday night. Loss on building $50,000, and J. D. Chollar, upholsterer, lost heavily, but his insurance to cover.

Special Notices.

A RAILROAD OVER THE HOPE.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier.

On the first really beautiful spring day, in May, we were riding on the new road to Mount Hope to gather wild flowers in the woods by the roadside. I never ride over this road but with thoughts unlike those I have on any other. It is the way to the grave, and always seems a way of tears, and I think of the "Bridge of Sighs" in Venice. Tears have watered its thousand times.

It was a glorious day indeed—warm, calm and bright. There were light showers from clouds so small and thin as to hide the sun but for a few moments at a time. One cloud, heavier than the rest, had passed over and lay away to the east, dark and heavy, beyond the cemetery, so that Mount Hope lay right against it—its tall pine drawn in outline against it. Also so had Mount Hope looked to sad processions approaching it—dark and dreadful, with all its natural beauties clouded by sorrow. While we rode on, the showers were falling around us, but the sun was shining, and while we looked, a rainbow came out on the eastern cloud so as exactly to span Mount Hope—one end resting upon the forests to the left, and the other resting upon the hills beyond the river. It was a picture never to be forgotten—the city of the dead upon the hills, lying against the black cloud, so true a type of the sorrow that surrounds it to engrossing mourners—the showers of heaven's tears falling around us—through them coming the sunshine of God from beyond all shadows, and throwing that glorious bow against the cloud, right over the silent city, crowning it with the royal emblem of immortality's promise—an emblem, also, of the abutment of which was on this side, near to us, and the other upon the hills "beyond the river."

It needed no very strong imagination to set to the music of the spring birds around us the hymn:

"Faith is the rainbow's arch
That spans the ocean wide,
Through which the pilgrim bends his way
Through which the saints to glory march."

GEN. JOOKNE ON SHERMAN'S BOOK.

A correspondent of the New York Times, who recently called on the once famous "Fighting Joe Hooker," says he spoke enthusiastically of war scenes, but upon the mention of Sherman's Memoirs he changed his topic and gravely condemned the manner in which some of the country's best-known Generals had been spoken of in them. Said he: "I had rather by almost those mud grubs than among those commended." In his esteem Gen'l Thomas was the great General of the Army. Sherman's superior as a soldier in every sense. Farragut was the hero of the war. He felt that justice to a command might require him to notice publicly some of Gen. Sherman's statements, and he should probably do so at the proper time. He thought that Genera Grant learned the character of his Lieutenant long before the war was ended, as I know, Sherman is ignored by the Administration, he can only thank himself for it.

COLLECTION OF TAXES. The New York Graph's states that the total amount of uncollected taxes and assessments for New York city aggregates $37,182,340.08, the annual interest on which is $2,620 934-04. Probably a large percentage of this will never be paid, though doubt lessly millions of dollars are due. In Boston the amount of uncollected taxes on the tax levy of 1874 is less than eight per cent.

The Lewiston Journal says: "Henry Wilson is like the wind that blows—where it listest, and no man knows whence it cometh or whither it goeth. THE THIRD TERM.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS OUT

A Reply to Pennsylvania!

HE IS NOT A CANDIDATE FOR RE-NOMINATION!

Letter from Gen. Grant to the President of the Pennsylvania Republican Convention.

EXECUTIVE MANSION,
WASHINGTON, D. C., May 29.

DEAR SIR,—A short time subsequent to the Presidential election of 1872, the public or portion of it hostile to the Republican party, and particularly so to the administration, set to the cry of Cæsarism" and the "third term," for me to be. Finding my position. On the latter subject I believed it to be beneath the dignity for the office which I have been twice called upon to fill in succession to enter into a discussion of the subject could be presented by competent authority to make a nomination, or by a body of such dignity and authority as not to make a reply a fair subject of ridicule. But now that I have been so many years sensible persons in the Republican party should permit their enemy to force upon them and their party an issue which cannot add strength to the party, no matter how met.

But a body of the dignity and party attributes of a convention to make nominations for the State offices of the great State is the Union having considered the question I deem it not improper that I should now speak. In the first place I never sought the office for a second, nor even for a first nomination. To the first I was called from a life position, one created by Congress expressly for me for supposed services rendered to the Republic. The position vacated I liked; it would have been most agreeable to me to have remained it until such time as Congress might have consented to my retirement with the rank and a portion of the emoluments which I so much needed, to a home where the balance of my days might be spent in peace and the enjoyments of domestic quiet, relieved from the cares which I had experienced for so constantly for fourteen years. But I was made to believe that the public good called me to make the sacrifice.

Without solicitation for the second term, the nomination was tendered me by the unanimous votes of the delegates of all the States and Territories selected by the Republicans of each to represent them in the National Convention. I cannot say that I was not pleased at this and at the overwhelming endorsement which the act on re-ceived, at the election following; but it must be remembered that all the sacrifices except that of comfort had been made in accepting the "first term"; then, too, such a flow of personal friends came handed back, kept up for four years, more illustrating the conscientious performance of my duties to the best of my understanding—though I admit in the light of subsequent events I may have been subject to fair criticism for a reinforcement from the people who know Revere Republics, was a gratification that it is only human to have appreciated and enjoyed.

Now for the "third term." I do not want it, I am more than the first. I would not write or utter a word to change the will of the people in expressing or not using their choice. The question of the number of terms allowed to any one Executive can only come airly in the shape of a proposition to amend the Constitution; a shape in which all the people will be heard from, and in fixing the length of time or number of terms for which any one person shall be elected for the office of President. Until such an amendment is adopted the people cannot be restricted in their choice by a resolution, further than they are now restricted as to age, nativity, etc. It may happen in the future history of the country that to the man for Executive because he has been eight years in office will prove unfortunate, if not disastrous. The fact that any man could elect himself President or even re-nominate himself, is pre-posterous. It is a reflection upon the intelligence and patriotism of the people to suppose such a thing possible. Any man can destroy his chances for the office, but no one can force an election or even a nomination.

To recapitulate—I am not, nor have I ever been a candidate for renomination; would not accept a nomination if it were tendered, unless it should come under such circumstances as to make it an imperative duty, a circumstance not like to arise.

I congratulate the convention over which you presided for the harmony which prevailed and for the excellent ticket put in the field, which I hope may be triumphantly elected.

With great respect.

Your obedient servant,

U. S. GRANT.

To Gen. Harry White, President of the Pennsylvania Republican State Convention.

MEMORIAL DAY.

BY REBECCA R. PIERCE.

I

Bring fragrant flowers to-day,
Sweet-scented blooms of May,
Our tributes to renew
To loyal hearts and true,
And deck with tender hand each hero's grave—
The honored and the brave!

II

Bring flowers, sweet, odorous flowers,
From Nature's fairest bowers,
Blossoms of every hue
For those, the brave and true,
Who fought beneath our country's flag, and gave
Their blood our Cause to save.

III

Over all our happy land,
By spring's soft zephyrs fanned,
Bright floral offerings bring,
And to the breezes fling
The starry folds that float o'er Ian I and sea
The embers of the Free!

IV

Proudly the years shall tell
Of those, who guarded well
Our flag,—when o'er the land,
Treason, with frenzied hand,
Sought to tear the matre of each fold,
While War's deep thunders rolled!

V

With reverend footsteps tread
Above the noble dead;
With fit tokens
Of each peaceful breast.
The [illegible] the sun of battle shine
[illegible]

VI

[illegible] wreath of Pine
[illegible]
[illegible] sweetest incense, flowers,
[illegible] and brass of cannon be
[illegible] who sacrificed shall be forgotten be

THE SONG THE TEAKETTLE SANG

Hot! hot! it was humming something in a kind of a big tune and started Nora with its interesting little fun.

Puff off puff came steam
And out into the air it dream
The tea's in shape at the start
Steam, steam steam I puff puff puff
I'm the steam that you see here
I come into that tea spout.

Do you suppose she said to herself [illegible] after hearing only at the door. What a singular [illegible] The tea was all ready to drink after all it was telling.

But for sure enough when she opened the door for the servant girl ran little bustling in with a tray white hair that looked like the dancing and smiling and tingled in with it's face entirely. All that Nora noticed of her was her head and a bit of a gentle old face, and as she remarked afterward the white reminded her for all the world of a tall thistle stalk in the sunlight, caught and was changing to a little [illegible]

How nice and warm you are now, you poor little dear, the nice little old lady said, as she [illegible] and smiled at the weird little object.

The child arose without a word and followed her into the room. Not a plaid of her [illegible] this and she sipped at her tea [illegible] handed to her by the lady, with [illegible] great relish.

Perhaps the lady thought Nora might be a [illegible] at once, but she [illegible] and [illegible] Nora [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]
